

DAVID J. ODE is a botanist and ecologist for the South Dakota Department of Game, Fish and Parks. He received his B.A. in biology from Augustana College in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and an M.S. in biology from South Dakota State University in Brookings.

SOUTH DAKOTA
STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY
PRESS
900 Governors Drive
Pierre, SD 57501-2217
www.sdhistorical.org

“If South Dakota had an official honorary title of ‘botanist laureate,’ it would properly belong to David Ode. . . . Ode’s writing is engaging and downright enjoyable. . . . A person cannot read one of these essays without feeling enriched and better informed about South Dakota’s varied environments and the plants that grow in them.”
—Gary E. Larson, Professor of Biology and Curator of the C. A. Taylor Herbarium, South Dakota State University

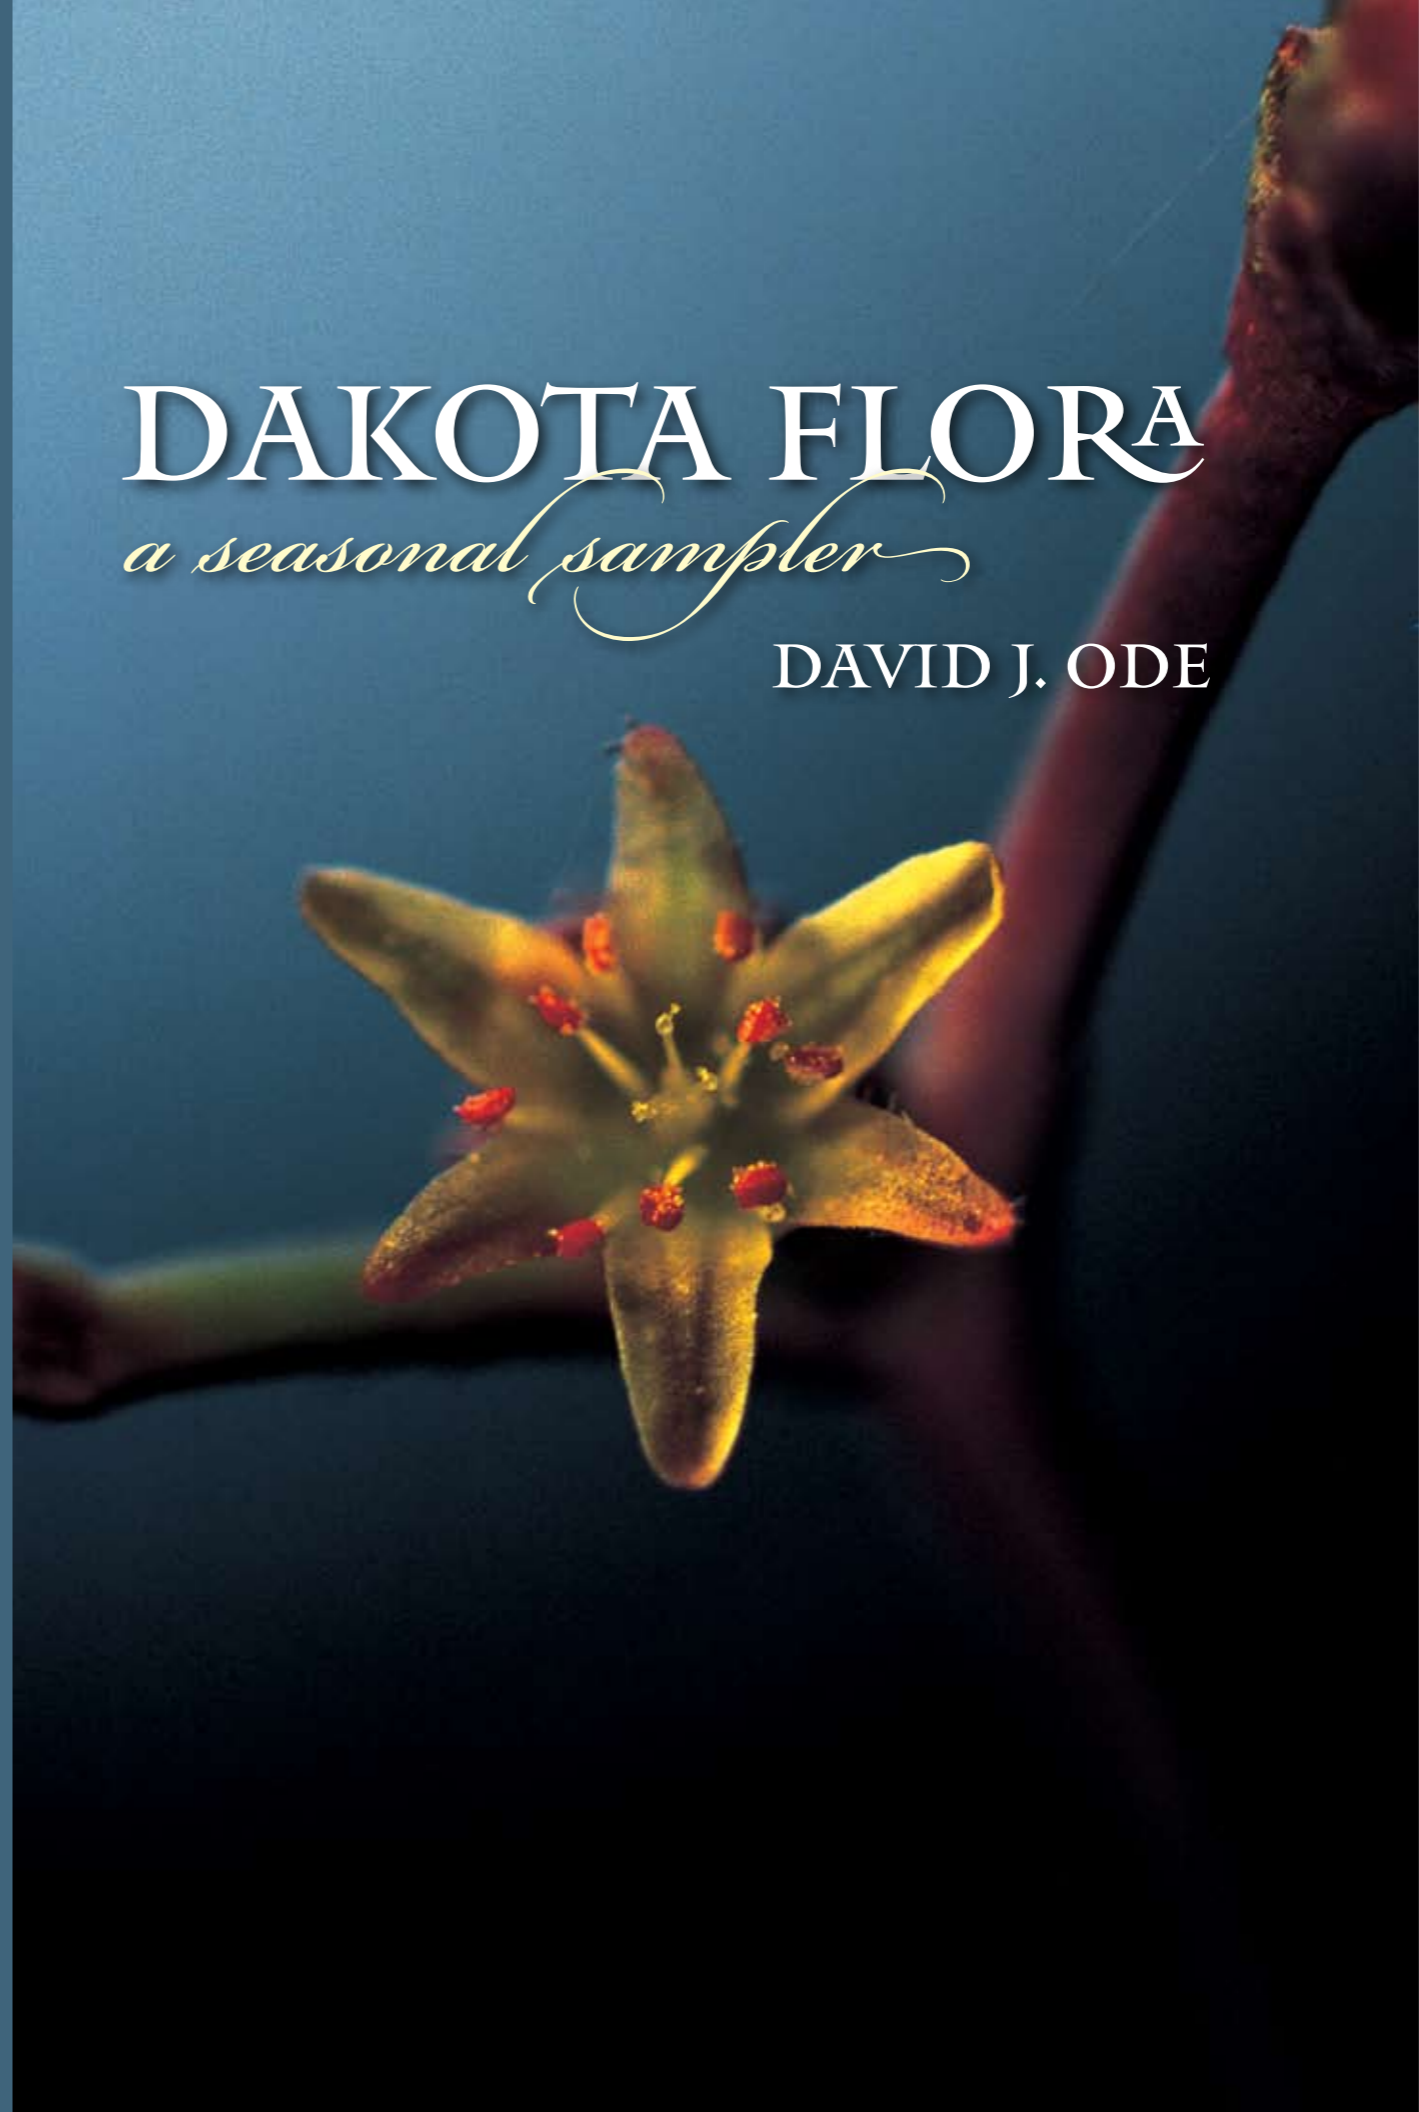

“David Ode’s writing is tight, accurate, frequently humorous, and nearly always contains an important historical flavor. As an amateur botanist, I read it from cover to cover and will refer to it frequently.”
—Tony Dean, Tony Dean Outdoors

ODE
DAKOTA FLORA

DAKOTA FLORA

a seasonal sampler

DAVID J. ODE

Brimming with information and anecdotes, Dakota Flora samples eighty-two plants of South Dakota. Botanist David Ode blends history, folklore, science, and poetry in exploring the flora of the region. Experience the seasons on the prairie as the compass plant plots your path, burdock fastens itself to your clothing, and the predatory Jack-in-the-pulpit lures its insect victims to its waiting trap. With outstanding photography, this visually stunning book is perfect for both home and field.

Printed in the United Kingdom

SDSHS
PRESS